Sefton formed an appreciation for art early on by taking college level art classes while still in high school. When he started college, the popular art style at the time did not suit him, so instead he studied chemistry. After graduation from University of Pittsburg, Sefton worked in the paint, pigment and industrial color industry.

Mr. Study is a painting of a man sitting on a wooden pier or dock, looking out over a body of water under a warm, orange sky. The man is wearing a light-colored shirt and pants. The scene is rendered in a soft, painterly style with visible brushstrokes. The background is a mix of warm tones, suggesting a sunset or sunrise. The water is a pale, hazy blue-green. The overall mood is contemplative and serene.
