USCB Center for the Arts kicks off new season

By Mindy Lucas

It's a warm, muggy August evening on the University of South Carolina Beaufort campus. Inside the university's Center for the Arts though, where rehearsals for Spamalot are taking place, it is cool and comfortable – a welcome relief from the summer heat.

On stage, the cast is gathered around various music stands as music director Josh Wall, on piano, leads the group through several numbers.

"It never turns out the way I think it will," said director Libby Ricardo earlier in the week. "It usually turns out better."

Ricardo now sits along with the production's choreographer Christopher Crabb about halfway
